ABOUT GRIFFIN

Griffin Littlejohn Lynch plays a crucial role at Harrison White P.C., providing the support work that is essential to lawyers preparing their cases for trial. After receiving her B.A., cum laude, from Presbyterian College in 2001, Griffin enrolled at the University of South Carolina School of Law, getting her J.D. in 2004. She worked at a large firm in Columbia throughout law school and continued working there as an attorney following law school for three years, focusing her work on litigation support. She came to Harrison White in 2007 to work in a similar capacity. She concentrates on business and complex litigation, including pharmaceutical cases. Griffin typically handles much of the discovery work upon which these cases are built and performs the research and drafting of pleadings necessary to prepare a case for trial.

PRACTICE AREAS

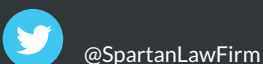

- Business Litigation
- Complex Litigation
- Pharmaceutical Litigation

IN GRIFFIN'S OWN WORDS

"I really enjoy the background work. I enjoy doing research, writing and meeting the wide variety of people with whom we deal while conducting pharmaceutical litigation."
